Meetings will be held in the CCNY (CUNY) Graduate Center, 33 West 42nd Street. Iberia, Today and in the Past: Problems of Development, will be the theme.

Panels will be organized on the basis of thematic and comparative (Luso-Hispanic) history rather than in terms of specific time periods in either Spanish or Portuguese history. Invitations are being extended to several Portuguese scholars. A detailed report on the Conference will appear in the February 1, 1975, issue of the NEWSLETTER.

Members of the Program Committee for the Conference are:

Michael Weisser, History Department,
CCNY, New York, N.Y. 10031.

Douglas L. Wheeler (Portugal),
History Department, University of

Those wishing to present papers at the Conference should send them to Professor Weisser. January 1, 1975, is the deadline for submission of papers. By February 1, the Program Committee will notify those whose papers have been selected. Those selected must submit a précis of their paper to the NEWSLETTER by April 1 for inclusion in the May issue.

NEW HEAD OF THE HISPANIC FOUNDATION OF THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

On October 1, 1974, Dr. Mary Ellis Kahler formally took over her new duties as Chief of the Latin American, Portuguese and Spanish Division of the Library of Congress (formerly known as the Hispanic Foundation). She replaces Earl J. Pariseau, Acting Director of the Hispanic Foundation, who has left the Library of Congress.

Dr. Kahler brings great experience to this Division where she has been assistant chief since June 1971. Born in Santiago, Chile, she received her B.A. from Swarthmore College and did graduate work both in library science and Latin American history. She holds a Ph.D. from American University.

Since 1949 she has been with the Library of Congress, working (inter alia) in the Union Catalog and Serials Divisions. Dr. Kahler has been active both in the American Library Association and in Latin American history professional organizations, serving as chairman of the Committee on Scholarly Resources of the Latin American Studies Association. She is a member of SALALM, SSPHS, Conference on Latin American History, and the AHA.

SEPHARDIC SYMPOSIUM:
HOMENAGE A DON AMERICO CASTRO

On the campus of the University of California, San Diego, on April 25-27, 1975, a symposium will be held on "The Rediscovery of the Hispano-Judaic Past." The purpose is both to honor the great humanist-historian, Don Américo Castro (sometime professor at the UC, San Diego campus) and to acknowledge the Sephardic heritage of the Hispanic World.

Emphasis will be given both to the role of Jews in Iberian culture, and to the historic role of Spanish-speaking Jews in societies ranging from the Balkans to the New World.

Dr. Yosef Hayim Yerushalmi, professor of Judaic studies at Harvard University, will give the keynote address.

Papers will also be presented by Samuel Armistead, University of Pennsylvania; Stephen Gilman, Harvard University; Israel Katz, Columbia University; Benzion Netanyahu, Cornell University; and Albert Sicroff, Queens College.

The symposium has been organized by the Project in Iberian and Latin American Studies to which further inquiries should be addressed (UC, San Diego, La Jolla, Calif. 92037).

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AT UCLA: "THE IMPACT OF THE NEW WORLD ON THE OLD"

The UCLA Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies has announced an international conference to be held on its campus, February 6-9, 1975. The theme is: "First Images of America: The Impact of the New World on the Old." Specifically, American and European scholars will consider "the multiple ways in which the discovery of the New World affected the thought, institutions, and modes of life of the Old." Cosponsors of the conference include UCLA, USC, Claremont Colleges, Loyola University, Cal. Tech., The Huntington Library, The Renaissance Society of America and its Pacific Coast regional conferences. Among the scholars who will speak are John H. Elliott and Charles H. Carter.

ACADEMY OF AMERICAN RESEARCH HISTORIANS OF MEDIEVAL SPAIN

A very extensive list has been prepared of scholars actively engaged in research on medieval Spanish history (from Visigothic to late Middle Ages). Compiled on the basis of responses from scholars who attended the Medieval Conference at Kalamazoo, or who responded to the notice in the American Historical Association Newsletter, or to an initial letter of inquiry, the list includes a description of the scholar's specific field of interest. For a copy of the list, and further information on the Academy of American Research Historians of Medieval Spain, write to: James F. Powers, Department of History, College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Mass. 01610.

SEVENTH INTERNATIONAL LUSO-BRAZILIAN COLLOQUIUM AND WORLD CONFERENCE ON BRAZILIAN HISTORY

The Luso-Brazilian Colloquium scheduled to be held at Florida International University on January 19-26, 1975, has been canceled. Early in November its principal planner, Ann Pescatello, was to send an explanatory letter to each of the invited participants.

THIRD NEH GRANT TO ROBERT I. BURNS, S.J.

The National Endowment for the Humanities, in September 1974, awarded a grant of $29,172 to Robert I. Burns, S.J. (University of San Francisco) to continue his archival research on the 13th century kingdom of Valencia. Two previous grants from NEH, in 1971 and 1973, supported earlier phases of this research, as did awards from the American Council of Learned Studies, the Ford Foundation, Princeton's Institute for Advanced Study, and a Guggenheim Fellowship.

NEH FUNDS PILOT PROJECT IN IBERIAN AND LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES AT UC, SAN DIEGO

Funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, members of the Project in Iberian and Latin American Studies at the University of California, San Diego, have organized for the current academic year a pilot interdisciplinary seminar. The focus is tripartite: Iberia, Latin America (essentially, the colonial era), and the Frontera (the region from San Diego to Tijuana, Mexico). One quarter will be devoted to each theme.

Faculty and students (both upper-division undergraduate and graduate) will come from the departments of history, literature, sociology, and anthropology. There will be guest lecturers from universities in the United States and Latin America.

The theme for the first quarter, directed by David Ringrose, is "Boundaries of Ibero-Mediterranean Civilization." The seminar will examine the Iberian Weltanschauung and the unifying features of Iberian and neo-Iberian cultures. Students will consider the possible existence of qualities that make Iberian culture distinct from that of its European neighbors, despite the historical changes and the differences among social, political, and religious climates within Iberia proper.

Weekly topics will include a presentation by Gabriel Jackson, professor of history at Revelle College, on "Spain and Europe in the 20th Century: Economic Convergence and Political Divergence." Another will be "Swinging Daughters, Lover Boys and Red-hot Mamas in Hispano-Arabic Poetry," a lecture by James Monroe, professor of Arabic and comparative literature at the University of California, Berkeley.

CONFERENCE GROUP ON MODERN PORTUGAL

Wheeler (History, University of New Hampshire). They plan a Newsletter for 1975 and urge both members and potential members to submit information about their research projects on modern Portuguese history. An edited set of the papers presented at the October 1973 Workshop (sponsored by the Council for European Studies) is presently being considered for publication by a major university press.

All correspondence concerning the Conference group should be directed to: Douglas L. Wheeler, History Department, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N.H. 03824.

PROGRAM IN SPAIN ENCOURAGES HISTORY MAJORS

History majors who have a good reading knowledge of Spanish, albeit only minor fluency, are encouraged to study in Spain, announced Frank De Fica, currently director of a foreign study program for American university students in Seville. De Fica points out that in this center, as in the one in Madrid and Pamplona, a serious student has a good opportunity to see documents first hand and to get the "societal feel" of Spanish culture. Interested students may write to: Academic Year in Spain, College Apt. 1084, Sevilla, Spain.

DEADLINE FOR NEWSLETTER

All items which are intended for publication in the February 1, 1975, issue of the SSPHS NEWSLETTER must reach the Office of Scholarly Journals, Parrington Hall DE-05, University of Washington 98195, by JANUARY 15, 1975.

La Bipolarización de las fuerzas políticas en Cataluña durante la II República:

La Destrucción de la alternativa centrista

por Isidre Molas

(Nota del editor: Este trabajo ha sido presentado en el V<sup>o</sup> Conferencia Anual de la SSPHS, celebrado en el Centro Internacional de la Universidad de California, San Diego, el 23 marzo de 1974. Isidre Molas es un profesor en el Departamento de Ciencia Política de la Facultad de Derecho, en la Universidad Autónoma de Barcelona.)

Proclamada la II República española en 1931 se dibujaron pronto dos grandes tendencias dentro del republicanismo: (a) unión táctica con el socialismo, para llevar adelante el programa republicano de reforma (Acción Republicana, Partido Radical-Socialista) y (b) adopción de una actitud moderada que permitiese la incorporación de la derecha tradicional al nuevo régimen, previamente reconvertida (Partido Radical). Pero la reestructuración de la derecha no se acogió a esta posibilidad y se operó a partir de una serie de oposiciones, especialmente a la reforma agraria, al laicismo y a las autonomías regionales, en la fórmula accidentalista de la C.E.D.A.

El sistema electoral republicano (plurinominal, a dos vueltas, con una fuerte prima a la mayoría y representación de la primera minoría) tendía a la formación de dos grandes bloques electorales, a partir del reagrupamiento de los partidos en amplios movimientos y, por su misma esencia, tendía a "expulsar" las terceras alternativas. Al incidir el marco legal sobre la potencial expresión de las opciones políticas, se produjo como resultado la consolidación progresiva de dos grandes alternativas forjadas a nivel circunscriptivo y la inexis-tencia de un sistema vertebrado y unificado de fuerzas políticas a escala española, como consecuencia de la lenta formación de los partidos unificados. Las unidades políticas aparecen marcadas a nivel regional y la unidad del sistema partidista se forja por la yuxtaposición de los elementos regionales. Así el grado de fragmentación de los partidos alcanza una cota muy superior a la fragmentación del electorado que opta siempre por alternativas claras y amplias.

Esta escasa vertebración del sistema de partidos tiene un inicio de corrección a lo largo de los años republicanos. En una primera fase (1931-1933) se opera la reorganización de los sectores conservadores, infrarepresentados en las Cortes Constituyentes. En una segunda fase (1933-1936) se reorganiza la izquierda democrática. En la tercera fase (1936), al paso que se constata el hundimiento organizativo del centro-derecha de 1935, se plantea en el Partido Socialista la necesidad de definir una estrategia unitaria: reforma o revolución. En Cataluña se produce, en cambio, una tendencia al bipartidismo (Lliga Catalana y Esquerra Republicana de Catalunya), en el que el sector democrático reformista se beneficia de la fuerza anarcosindicalista y su no participación en las elecciones como fuerza autónoma.

En este proceso el centro-derecha y el centro-izquierda tienden a polarizarse para conseguir algún éxito, y en la medida en que la polarización se produce aumenta su distanciamiento. Todo ello lleva a considerar que el hundimiento del centro se produce tanto por su fragmentación, la escasa base social y los personalismos de sus líderes, como a la imposibilidad de imponer un polo de atracción electoral con una alternativa con posibilidades de victoria. Sus intentos de llevarlo a cabo son rechazados progresivamente con mayor fuerza por el electorado, como consecuencia de las derrotas anteriores. Sus posibilidades de influir pasan por sus alianzas con la derecha o la izquierda, con el desgarramiento del centro como tal, para intentar incidir en cada uno de los bloques desde dentro y alcanzar un número de elegidos suficiente para asegurarle una posición de equilibrio. El proceso de destrucción de la alternativa centrista resulta evidente en Cataluña donde su peso en la sociedad es más amplio, pero donde tras cada votación su expresión política autónoma es menor, a costa de un desplazamiento de votos en favor de los dos partidos fundamentales, ejes de las coaliciones. Sólo en Tarragona consigue una cierta permanencia (elecciones de 20 noviembre 1932 para formar el Parlamento de Cataluña, y 19 noviembre 1933 para diputados a Cortes), gracias a la alianza de radicales-socialistas, federales y Acció Catalana Republicana.

Pero el triunfo de las coaliciones de centro-derecha en la mayor parte de España en noviembre 1933 (y en tres de las cinco circunscripciones catalanas), provoca una reacción en el centrismo, que se concreta en las elecciones municipales de 14 enero 1934, donde se produce una convergencia entre centro-izquierda e izquierda democrática para oponer un dique al avance de los conservadores. Así se produce una alianza, que prefigura ya lo esencial de las fuerzas reunidas en el Front d'Esquerres de 1936. Las elecciones, fuertemente politizadas, dan como resultado el triunfo de los coaligados, sin que al mismo coadyuven los hipotéticos sufragios anarcosindicalistas, en las dos circunscripciones que hemos estudiado (Tarragona y Barcelona-ciudad). En la primera de ellas con insignificante presencia cenetista, la polarización se produce de forma plena (Partido Radical con la derecha y el resto del centro con la izquierda) y este solo hecho lleva al triunfo a los demócratas reformistas en el conjunto de Tarragona. En la ciudad de Barcelona, aun manteniéndose la abstención del anarquismo, la acumulación de votos es suficiente para dar el triunfo a la coalición (50.15% frente a 41.20% de la Lliga).

La perspectiva de la supervivencia del centro como alternativa independiente quedaba muy reducida y el planteamiento de la contienda electoral de febrero de 1936 lo confirmaría. Entre 1934 y 1936 no existe, por otra parte, modificación del signo de los resultados. Los sufragios anarcosindicalistas no aparecen así como cruciales en estas dos circunscripciones para el triunfo del Frente Popular, sino como un simple incremento de las diferencias ya registradas en 1934, después de haberse procedido a la corrección de los planteamientos electorales de 1933. El estallido de la guerra civil eliminaría no sólo la posibilidad de articularse el centro como alternativa autónoma, sino también la posibilidad de llegar a influir directamente sobre los núcleos neurálgicos de las alternativas políticas de uno y otro bando.

My current research concerns the preconditions for the Comunero movement in Castile of 1520. I intend to focus the study as broadly as possible, and to deal with the movement in a way that relates it closely to the structural changes that were occurring in Castilian society during the 30-year period before its outbreak. I shall use primary sources from the major Comunero cities, the Salazar and Osuña collections in Madrid, and the Archivo de Simancas. I have already done more than nine months of work on the project, and will return to Spain in March 1975 for an additional eighteen months. I hope to complete a book-length manuscript sometime in 1977.

Research in progress:

I have been working for some years on the origins of the Spanish Civil War, with particular reference to the so-called radicalization of the Socialists during the Republic. The internal schism within the PSOE is studied within the context of the behavior of the Right, of events abroad, and of the failure of reform within the Republic. I hope to have a book completed by the autumn of 1974. I have already published studies on the monarchists during the Republic, and on the 'moderate' Right (see above).
At the University of Reading, I direct a research seminar on "Spain under Franco." Increasingly I am undertaking work in this field, with especial regard to violent and tolerated opposition to the Regime (see last two items listed above).

JOHN D. VINCENT-SMITH, Dartmouth, Devon, England

Research in progress:

From October 1, 1974, I shall be in Lisbon researching into aspects of Portuguese history from 1918 through the 1930's, with a certain emphasis on the role of the Anglo-Portuguese alliance. By special authority I shall be using the Archives of the Foreign Ministry extensively. Part of this research may be incorporated in a book on Modern Portugal which is in preparation for Ernest Benn, Ltd., London. A nine-month Gulbenkian Foundation award is financing this research. (My address for the academic year 1974-75 is: Instituto Britânico em Portugal, Rua Luis Fernandes 3, Lisbon.)

DOUGLAS L. WHEELER, University of New Hampshire, Durham

Research in progress:

I am continuing research on the history of Portugal's First Republic (1910-1926). During a brief trip to Portugal, following the April 25, 1974 coup d'état, I was able to obtain more materials (especially memoirs and histories of education). I am now in the process of obtaining newly published Portuguese secondary materials, either by mail or on another trip to Lisbon.

In a project which complements my historical research, I am analyzing current Portuguese affairs and comparing political trends of 1974 with those of the era 1910-26. I was fortunate to be able to observe and film episodes of the May 1, 1974, "Dia do Trabalho" in Lisbon, where there were extensive popular demonstrations and celebrations of the military coup.
